ADS 509 Assignment 2.1: Tokenization, Normalization, Descriptive Statistics

This notebook holds Assignment 2.1 for Module 2 in ADS 509, Applied Text Mining. Work through this notebook, writing code and answering questions where required.

In the previous assignment you pulled lyrics data on two artists. In this assignment we explore this data set and a pull from the now-defunct Twitter API for the artists Cher and Robyn. If, for some reason, you did not complete that previous assignment, data to use for this assignment can be found in the assignment materials section of Canvas.

This assignment asks you to write a short function to calculate some descriptive statistics on a piece of text. Then you are asked to find some interesting and unique statistics on your corpora.

General Assignment Instructions

These instructions are included in every assignment, to remind you of the coding standards for the class. Feel free to delete this cell after reading it.

One sign of mature code is conforming to a style guide. We recommend the Google Python Style Guide. If you use a different style guide, please include a cell with a link.

Your code should be relatively easy-to-read, sensibly commented, and clean. Writing code is a messy process, so please be sure to edit your final submission. Remove any cells that are not needed or parts of cells that contain unnecessary code. Remove inessential `import` statements and make sure that all such statements are moved into the designated cell.

Make use of non-code cells for written commentary. These cells should be grammatical and clearly written. In some of these cells you will have questions to answer. The questions will be marked by a "Q:" and will have a corresponding "A:" spot for you. Make sure to answer every question marked with a `Q:` for full credit.

Q: Why is it beneficial to use assertion statements in your code?

A: Assertions are valuable tools because they ensure the correctness of the code, improve code quality, and aid in debugging. They help catch errors early by verifying that certain conditions hold true during execution. This error detection makes the codebase reliable. Assertions serve as a form of documentation, making the code easier to understand for other developers and enhancing code robustness.

Data Input

Now read in each of the corpora. For the lyrics data, it may be convenient to store the entire contents of the file to make it easier to inspect the titles individually, as you'll do in the last part of the assignment. In the solution, I stored the lyrics data in a dictionary with two dimensions of keys: artist and song. The value was the file contents. A data frame would work equally well.

For the Twitter data, we only need the description field for this assignment. Feel free all the descriptions read it into a data structure. In the solution, I stored the descriptions as a dictionary of lists, with the key being the artist.

In [7]:
```python
Read in the lyrics data

define path location for lyrics
lyrics_location = "/Users/samantharivas/Documents/UNIVERSITY OF SAN DIEGO/AD

read in the lyrics data
lyrics_data = {}
for artist in os.listdir(lyrics_location):
    artist_folder = os.path.join(lyrics_location, artist)
    if os.path.isdir(artist_folder):   # Check if it's a directory lyrics_data[artist] = {}
        for song_file in os.listdir(artist_folder):
            song_path = os.path.join(artist_folder, song_file)
            if os.path.isfile(song_path):   # Check if it's a file
                with open(song_path, 'r', encoding='utf-8') as file:
                    lyrics_data[artist][song_file] = file.read()

print(lyrics_data)

Data Cleaning

Now clean and tokenize your data. Remove punctuation chacters (available in the `punctuation` object in the `string` library), split on whitespace, fold to lowercase, and remove stopwords. Store your cleaned data, which must be accessible as an interable for `descriptive_stats`, in new objects or in new columns in your data frame.

```python
punctuation = set(punctuation) # speeds up comparison

Q: How do you think the "top 5 words" would be different if we left stopwords in the data?

A: Leaving stopwords would result in a different set of top 5 words, including common words such as 'the', 'of, 'is', 'and'. These common words do not carry semantic meaning and leaving them can result in skewed words by highlighting common words instead of meaningful ones.

Q: What were your prior beliefs about the lexical diversity between the artists? Does the difference (or lack thereof) in lexical diversity between the artists conform to your prior beliefs?

A: Prior beliefs about lexical diversity between artists can vary based on factors such as audience demographics, genre, and lyrical style. Artists may adjust their word choice depending on their audience, leading to differences in lexical diversity. Genres can influence narrative complexity, with some genres favoring intricate narratives while others prefer simplicity. This same influence is applied to lyrical style, where certain genres may encourage more elaborate or straightforward expressions. It suggests that artists tailor their linguistic choices to align with the expectations and preferences of their target audience.

Specialty Statistics

The descriptive statistics we have calculated are quite generic. You will now calculate a handful of statistics tailored to these data.

1. Ten most common emojis by artist in the twitter descriptions.
2. Ten most common hashtags by artist in the twitter descriptions.
3. Five most common words in song titles by artist.
4. For each artist, a histogram of song lengths (in terms of number of tokens)

We can use the `emoji` library to help us identify emojis and you have been given a function to help you.

In [16]:   assert(emoji.is_emoji("❤️")) assert(not emoji.is_emoji(":-)"))

Song Lengths

For each artist, a histogram of song lengths (in terms of number of tokens). If you put the song lengths in a data frame with an artist column, matplotlib will make the plotting quite easy. An example is given to help you out.

In [28]:
```python
num_replicates = 1000

df = pd.DataFrame({
    "artist" : ['Artist 1'] * num_replicates + ['Artist 2']*num_replicates,
    "length" : np.concatenate((np.random.poisson(125,num_replicates),np.rand df.groupby('artist')['length'].plot(kind="hist",density=True,alpha=0.5,legen

Out[28]:
artist
Artist 1    AxesSubplot(0.125,0.11;0.775x0.77)
Artist 2    AxesSubplot(0.125,0.11;0.775x0.77)
Name: length, dtype: object

Since the lyrics may be stored with carriage returns or tabs, it may be useful to have a function that can collapse whitespace, using regular expressions, and be used for splitting.

Q: What does the regular expression `'\s+'` match on?

A: `'\s'` matches any whitespace characters such as spaces, tabs, and newline characters. `'+'` matches one or more occurrences of the preceding element. Therefore, the combined `'\s+'` will match one or more whitespace characters.

In [29]:   collapse_whitespace = re.compile(r'\s+')

           def tokenize_lyrics(lyric) :
               """strip and split on whitespace"""
               return([item.lower() for item in collapse_whitespace.split(lyric)])

In [33]:  # Your lyric length comparison chart here.

          # initialize lists to store song lengths and artists
          song_lengths = []
          artists = []

          # iterate over directory (artist) in lyrics directory
          for artist in os.listdir(lyrics_location):
              artist_folder = os.path.join(lyrics_location, artist)
              if os.path.isdir(artist_folder):
                  for song_file in os.listdir(artist_folder):
                      song_path = os.path.join(artist_folder, song_file)
                      if os.path.isfile(song_path):
                          with open(song_path, 'r', encoding='utf-8') as file:
                              lyrics = file.read()
                              tokens = tokenize_lyrics(lyrics)
                              song_lengths.append(len(tokens))
                              artists.append(artist)

          # create df with song lengths and artists
          df = pd.DataFrame({"artist": artists, "length": song_lengths})
